MY HOUSEPLANT SCREAMED AND SAVED MY LIFE!

It shrieked like a human being and scared 2 masked burglars away!

By SCOTTY PAUL
(Correspondent)

A sweet old spinster was seconds away from being mugged, robbed or worse until the burglars who broke into her home were scared away by the bloodcurdling screams of a houseplant!

"I know it sounds crazy but that flower saved my life," said Maude Fleming, who was cowering in her bed when the exotic Angel's Trumpet houseplant that she keeps on a nightstand shrieked.

"My plants are all I have," she continued. "I really do care for them and apparently, they care for me, too."

The mind-numbing drama reportedly unfolded a few hours after the 75-year-old woman went to bed at her home in suburban Los Angeles. In her statement to police, Miss Fleming said she was awakened by the sound of a brick crashing through her bedroom window.

Paralyzed with fear, she watched two men in masks crawl into her house. Because her bed was on the side of the room opposite the window, the intruders didn't see her — but they were well within earshot of the plant.

"I wanted to cry out but I was too scared," said Miss Fleming. "Suddenly I heard a buzzing noise that got louder and louder until it was a shriek. I thought it was my smoke alarm, but then I realized it was my houseplant that actually screamed like a human being.

"And when the burglars heard it they must have thought that it was a human, too, because they jumped out the window and ran like the dickens to get away."

Miss Fleming telephoned police who arrived to investigate within 10 minutes of the break-in. They confirmed that her bedroom window was broken and her house had been illegally entered but stopped short of crediting the houseplant with scaring any would-be burglars away.

"Burglars broke into her house and somebody or something scared them away," said one officer familiar with the case.

"Miss Fleming says her houseplant screamed and who knows — maybe it did.

"Stranger things have happened before. And as crazy as it sounds, I guess stranger things will happen again."

No arrests have been made yet, said the cop. Meanwhile, Miss Fleming has bought herself a burglar alarm to protect herself from any more break-ins.

"My friends say my flowers are the best burglar alarm anyone could have but I can't be sure that any of them would scream again," she said. "Maybe this was the Good Lord's way of telling me to get a burglar alarm and take better care of myself.

"Maybe He performed a miracle just this once. He ought not perform one again."

Several botanists consulted about the break-in were as baffled as police when told that the houseplant screamed. One noted that plants and vegetables do emit a low-level sonic signal when they're under stress, but added that he had never heard of a plant of any kind mimicking the screams of a human being.

"If the plant really did scream then the explanation is not within the realm of science," said the expert. "Miss Fleming was probably close to the truth when she called it a miracle from God.

"That might make some sense."

MISS FLEMING shows how the two masked men got into her house.

MY HERO! Maude Fleming treats her precious Angel's Trumpet plant to some tender loving care after it shooed burglars away.

PHONE-SEX SIREN WAS REALLY A GUY!

By SUSAN JAMISON
Staff writer

Hardworking dad Darryl Malone says he was denied a promotion even though he was terrific at his job — pretending to be a gorgeous babe named Raven and whispering words of love over a romance line.

The 6-foot Sparks, Nev., former Marine says he was passed over for promotion to supervisor because his employer believed a man couldn't head up a hotline of sex-talking females.

Malone, 29, says he thinks he would have been a wonderful supervisor because he knows just what men like — and he's suing his former employer, Northwest Nevada Telco, for back pay, damages and an apology.

"My boss told me he didn't know how the girls would take it," Malone said. "But he used tapes of me on the telephone as a training tool.

"The clients fell in love with me. I got letters from guys wanting to marry me. Clients had no idea I was a man and I was really great at what I did. But I wasn't allowed to branch out with the company."

Raven's boss, Jack Lawless, says Malone had on-going problems with his voice and with his attendance and that was why he was passed over for promotion. He says Malone was never actually terminated from his job. But Malone, an expert mimic, says he was dismissed last November after he began trying to become a supervisor, even though he was a first-class employee.

The married father of six says he began working at the hotline at the suggestion of his wife, Donna, who had worked there before him. He says he called Lawless and worked 11 to 16 hours a day, he says.

"I convinced these guys I was a white female," says Malone, who is black and weighs 165 pounds. "Raven has long blonde hair that falls past her waist. She is half Cherokee and half Irish. She's 5-foot-7, 127 pounds and her measurements are 36-27-36.

"I'd talk to them romantically, tell them 'I like doing all sorts of things.' They loved Raven. Actually, since I stopped working at the hotline, I miss her."

KISS 'N' TELL granny Sally Fischer shares memories of five presidents that will never appear in the history books.

By ROCK TRACY
Exclusive to The NEWS

You won't catch her writing any gossipy books for money, but gorgeous grandma Sally Fischer could make today's kiss-and-tell cuties look like choir girls when it comes to fast lane fun and games — because she's slept with five U.S. presidents.

Now 70 and still pretty enough to turn a man's eye, sexy Sally has nothing but fond memories of the nights she spent with Franklin D. Roosevelt, Harry Truman, Dwight D. Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson.

"I knew them to be kind and gentle men who could let their hair down and have fun," she said. "But I would be less than honest if I said they were all good lovers.

"In fact, Lyndon and I used to joke about his shortcomings. I called him 'Quick draw.'"

Fun-loving Sally says Jack Kennedy was bashful in bed and had the best sense of humor. LBJ was the most generous and Ike was "far and away the most romantic."

"Franklin (FDR) was the unhappiest man I believe I ever met.

"But I made him forget the war, his own physical pain, and most of all, Eleanor."

Sally, an executive secretary in Washington for more than 30 years, now lives in Colorado.

She remembers Truman as a compassionate man with a sense of humor.

And Kennedy, she recalls, was a very bashful lover who wouldn't take his clothes off until she turned out the light.

Sally was 20 and fresh out of college when she met FDR at a Washington dinner party in 1942.

She was introduced by a ed Harvard with the president.

"We hit it off right from the start," Sally said. "My brother had polio as did the president, so I knew what he was going through.

"I had great respect for that man. America will never really know the pain and worry he carried inside his crippled body. But at least for one September night in 1943 I made him laugh and love and forget.

"We talked about his happiest days as a young lawyer in New York, his unhappy marriage. But we didn't talk about the war," she said. "I felt sorry for him.

"I wanted to comfort him. We made love and fell asleep snuggled up in a White House bed.

"He called me often after our night together but we didn't make love again before his death. I didn't go to his funeral. I often think of him."

Truman was a very funny man with a quick wit.

"We met in Washington and got together one evening when he was campaigning in Kansas City in 1948. He nicknamed me 'Sally' because I always wanted extra salt with my margaritas. I called him 'Hammer' for reasons that will forever remain private.

"Lyndon and I joked about his shortcomings... I called him Quickdraw"

"Truman never forget those who helped him rise from a man who once ran his family's farm to a man who ran the country," she said. "He made me laugh and that made our lovin' fun."

Sally said she went out of her way to meet Eisenhower shortly after he became chief of staff after World War II. It finally happened at a fund-raising ball in the nation's capital.

"I have always been attract-said. "My last romance was [illegible] He called me many times after he became president, but we didn't make love until one unforgettable night in the White House in 1935.

"Until that night I didn't really know why people had worn those 'I Like Ike' buttons during the campaign. But after that night I certainly knew why I liked Ike!"

Sally said she'd had too much to drink the night Jack Kennedy visited her bedroom after a private party in New England.

"We talked for a while and then we just kind of slipped into bed," she said. "I just wish I had drunk less so that I could have enjoyed it more. We made love two more times but they weren't exactly unforgettable experiences."

The partying granny said Johnson had a tattoo of a steer's horns that couldn't be seen unless he was stark naked.

"I saw the tattoo on at least two occasions," she said. [illegible] Johnson campaign contributor in 1960."

The generous Texan showered her with expensive jewelry and other gifts during their brief affair.

"One of his aides would deliver them to me but I returned them all."

There was one president who wasn't Sally's cup of tea.

President Nixon was a real turnoff, she said.

"He didn't look like someone I'd like to see lying next to me in bed when I woke up. He has cold eyes."

When a reporter asked if she had slept with any ex-president who is still alive, Sally smiled and said:

"You're damn right I have, sonny!"

The graying granny still drinks her margaritas, goes to Las Vegas twice a year and remembers the good times.

"I didn't make money off them while they were alive and I'm not going to make money by writing a book now that they are dead.

NOW SHE RATES 'EM (on a scale of 1 to 10)

ROOSEVELT

A surprising 8. His polio wasn't the problem I thought it would be.

TRUMAN

A slow-starting 7. A funny little possum who made me laugh. It's a shame he didn't take sex as serious as me.

EISENHOWER

A definite 10. A tireless campaigner. Now I know why we won World War II.

KENNEDY

A 2 compared to the others. His pain in the back was a pain in the neck for me. As a lover, Jack was a nice guy.

JOHNSON

A 5 on his best night. Too much of the bubbly

HOW TO BE GREAT

Ten golden rules to make your

By SUSAN JIMISON

You can be a sexcess in the sack — the best your partner ever had in bed — if you follow these tantalizing tips from sex experts polled by The Weekly World News.

Just read over their advice, then seduce your sweetheart and put your newfound knowledge to use. With these pointers from the specialists, you'll have the sensual experiences you've always dreamed of — and leave your loved one begging for more.

●Make yourself irresistible. A clean, sweet-smelling body is a must. Shower, brush your teeth, dab on a little after-shave or perfume. The perfect lover is a person who's heavenly to be near.

●Relax. Tension and stress make good lovemaking impossible. Clear your mind of worries and concentrate on the pleasures you will experience. Breathe deeply.

●Wipe out guilt. Any act that contributes to the sexual pleasure of both partners is beautiful and normal. To help yourself put shame aside, get comfortable with the intimate areas of your own body, stroking and touching to learn what feels good.

●Set the scene for love. Set aside a special time when you know you won't be disturbed. Dim the lights, put on soft, sexy music, light some incense or a candle. Give your sweetheart a glass of wine to help set the proper mood for romantic.

●Undress with finesse. Taking off your clothes — or your partner's clothes — can be a super sexy part of foreplay. Strip off a shirt and shower kisses on your mate's skin you expose. Slip your hands under a sweater. Tease, caress, and enjoy the change in nudity.

●Take your time. Don't rush to have an orgasm or pressure your partner to climax. Just enjoy the sensations as the two of you kiss, cuddle, massage, lick and nuzzle each other.

●Be gentle. Don't grab for intimate areas or insist on rushing.

oing the show instead, use soft strokes and gentle moves to drive your partner wild.

Pay attention to what your sweetheart responds to and tailor your lovemaking to deliver the maximum pleasure.

●Talk to one another. Say what pleases you, using everyday language.

If you and your partner tell each other what feels good, you'll learn how to satisfy each other's special desires.

●Try something different. Change positions, experiment, vary the way you kiss and touch.

Try gently biting, scratching, or tickling to bring fresh new sensual delights to your partner.

●Don't fake it. Be honest about what you really want in bed and be honest about eliminating.

Faking orgasms makes it impossible to work with your partner on achieving a real orgasm, so don't do it.

And if you truly feel satisfied even though you didn't have a shuddering climax, tell your partner so.

HOW TO USE FLATTERY TO GET AHEAD AT WORK

You can get ahead on the job by flattering your boss — but you've got to do it right, say the experts.

"Everybody likes to be flattered, and people tend to like people who make them feel good," declared Dr. Stuart Schmidt.

Here are tips from experts on how to use flattery to influence your boss:

1. Study your boss so you know what pleases him. Some bosses will reward "yes men," while others like an employee who speaks his mind. "To flatter your boss, present yourself in the way you think is attractive to him," said Dr. Schmidt.

2. When you do use flattery, don't lie. "False compliments can backfire and make the boss dislike you," said Dr. Karl Schulze.

3. Flatter your boss by agreeing with him. "You can get a person to like you by indicating that your beliefs and values are similar to his," Dr. Schmidt explained.

4. Dress appropriately and neatly on the job. When you dress the way your superior thinks is proper, it's a way of showing respect for him, and displays your willingness to be influenced by his standards.

5. Pay close attention to the boss — it's the most basic form of flattery. "Bosses want to feel that their workers are attending to the bosses' interest and being sensitive to their needs," Dr. Schulze said.

For example, if your boss is a worrier, you can say to him, "Look, I know you're worried about this and I want you to know I'll have it done quickly."

6. Learn to be a good listener. Bosses appreciate workers who listen well, and it makes people feel good when they know they are listened to.

7. Use body language to flatter your boss. That's the advice of psychology professor Harry Reisenber. Maintain eye contact when your boss is talking to you.

And you should lean attentively toward him, to show him you think his opinions are important.

HOCKEY PLAYER KILLS OPPONENT WITH STICK

... say cops in bizarre case!

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

In the fury of a hard-fought game, Italian hockey star Jimmy Boni lashed out with his stick and sent his teenage opponent crashing to the ice — dead as a doornail!

Boni, a 28-year-old father of two and a former Canadian player, was charged with homicide after he hit 19-year-old Miran Schrott in the chest with his stick during a game in Courtmayeur, Italy.

The injured player was rushed to a hospital where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

The charges against Boni — known in Italy as "The Angel of the Ice" for his lack of aggressiveness — have left his family and friends stunned with disbelief.

"They've charged him with homicide. It's silly," Jimmy's sister-in-law Penny Boni said. "He hit him with the flat of his stick.

"It left no mark of impact. There was no bruising. Jimmy is the last person in the world who would deliberately try to hurt anyone. Jimmy is not known as being a rough player.

"In fact, everyone believes he's actually too gentle a person for the game.

"He has been devastated by his death.

"It's something he'll never be able to forget or put behind him."

CHARGES against hockey star Jimmy Boni made headlines in Canadian newspapers.

It's final year in hockey, a decision no doubt prompted by an incident in 1981, when he almost lost an eye when struck by a puck.

"He said maybe that was an omen to quit," explained his sister, Terry DiGiantis.

"But he had a passion for the game.

"He doesn't need the money. He just loves hockey. He promised us this would be his last year."

It now appears that Boni has nothing to say about his future in hockey.

He has been indefinitely suspended from the Italian league.

"I think if I go on playing hockey people might think that I don't feel anything for what happened to that boy," said Boni, who grew up in Thetford, but now lives in his native Italy.

"It's very difficult to explain how I feel now and I think it's difficult for people to understand what's happening in my

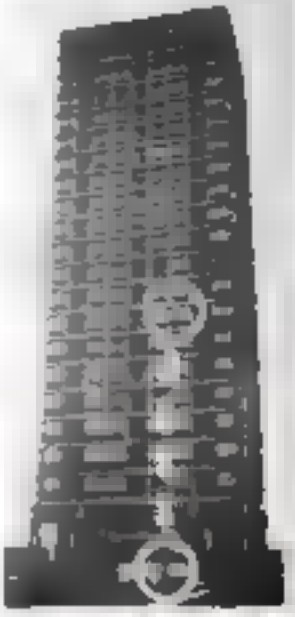
HUBBY CATCHES WIFE IN 9-STORY SUICIDE LEAP!

LEFT: Grateful Delia Lane embraces her injured husband Wes after he heroically — and luckily — saved her life.

BELOW: Circles show window and point of impact



By JOE BERGER
World writer

Heartsick housewife Delia Lane leaped from a ninth-floor window in a spine-chilling attempt to take her own life. But desperate Delia was saved by the skin of her teeth — when she landed in the outstretched arms of her loving hubby Wes!

"She came crashing down on me like a ton of bricks and almost knocked the wedding out of me," wrote Wes into report ed in San Jose, Costa Rica.

"I'm still a little numb how and my neck hurts like hell, but that's okay because I survived and Delia survived, and she doesn't want to kill herself anymore. She says God spared her life and if He wants her to live, she wants to live, too.

"To me it's a miracle, pure and simple."

The hair-raising tale began three weeks earlier when Wes and Delia got word that Delia's only sister had died in a car crash near their former home in Houston.

"We attended the funeral and when we got back I could tell Delia was about as down as I'd ever seen her," the hus band-turned-hubby recalled. "But good Lord, I never dreamed she'd try to do herself in.

"In fact, I came home from work early the day she jumped because we were going to a friend's birthday party. Otherwise, I wouldn't have been there to catch her when she came flying down at me at 90 miles an hour.

"The chances of timing things like that have got to be a million to one — maybe even a billion to one for all I know."

Unsuspecting Wes, 41, just happened to be walking beneath his apartment balcony, headed for home, when a frantic passerby screamed, "Watch out — she's gonna jump!"

The startled store clerk looked up just in time to see devastated Delia, 34, plummeting headlong to her doom.

"She was coming so fast I barely had time to think," he said with a shudder. "I guess I acted kind of instinctively.

"I stepped back and braced myself and held out my arms to catch her. And the next thing I knew, BOOM! — she [illegible] I said, 'My God, Delia are you all right?' and she muttered something back, and there I think we both passed out.' Bewildered Wes suffered a disturbed back, a ruptured tendon in his arm and a slight concussion — but incredibly, Delia escaped without a scratch.

"Just look at that poor man I feel terrible about what I did to him," said the grateful lady.

"I was so shook-up over losing my sister and everything, I just wanted to die. It was the only time I ever felt that way in my life. I swear Dan God gave me a second chance, and now I've got to take advantage of it.

"After all, when you jump some stranger to kill yourself and your husband just happens to be coach you in his arms, that's no coincidence — that's a mir-

How to trick yourself into feeling better — & even losing weight!

You can use a medical principle known worldwide as the "placebo effect" to lose weight, make inexpensive food taste very special, and even get a sick person to feel better, say medical experts.

The placebo effect is one of the best ways of tricking the mind into influencing the body to do what you want with it.

Doctors have known for many, many years that they can give patients a harmless substance, call it "medicine" - and the patients get better.

"The idea is to fool the mind so that you experience what you want to," says Dr. John Sessions.

Here's how you can put the placebo effect to work for you:

■ You can lose weight by shining a green light on food so that it appears unattractive, as suggested.

■ Another way to cut down on food is to trick your eyes into thinking you're eating much more than you really are, said Dr. Neal Parker.

"We eat what looks like the amount we want. So select low-calorie foods, like salads, that give you the illusion that you're eating more."

■ You can use the placebo effect to make less-palatable foods taste better - simply by serving them as if they were gourmet fare, he said.

"In effect, what happens is that the pleasure you've taken from our surroundings enhances our taste of food," Dr. Parker said.

■ "Use of a placebo is the oldest principle of medicine. It's been used by witch doctors all the way to modern physicians," said Dr. Hensline.

For example, if your child complains of a stomach ache, tell him, "I know your stomach hurts. So what we'll do is rub your tummy and give you this special medicine the doctor has prescribed." Dr. Parker said.

"Use the placebo effect," the doctor continued. "Tell him, this is really going to work."

Soviet experiment reaches [illegible] — and Hell!

SCIENTISTS JOURNEY INTO THE AFTERLIFE!

By MICHAEL TODD
Special correspondent

A team of top scientists allowed themselves to be "killed" during a series of controlled experiments to determine if the soul continues to exist after the body ceases to function.

Incredibly, reports now surfacing in Europe indicate a mental state does live on after death. And the soul enters into anguish or bliss in settings appallingly similar to Heaven and Hell.

Identity French and German reports said the experiments were conducted on four volunteer scientists in a sealed wing of a medical clinic near Magdeburg, Germany in late January.

Details are lacking, but information provided by a scientist close to the experiment suggests that a volunteer leveled the research team's ethical charges in telephone conversations with colleagues in Europe. Dr. Yury Dmitrin said, "The subjects were frozen to death under [illegible] liters of nutritious, thawed after 30 minutes, and in three cases revived. Two have responded positively to questions about an afterlife."

Austrian research biologist Ernst Jupke has not been in direct contact with the German clinic, but he told the press that, "It is obvious they have pushed the science of cryogenics — the freezing and thawing of human tissue — to its ultimate terrestrial limit."

Newspaper accounts based on interviews with German sources confirmed that only three of the four scientists survived the experiment.

One, a Yugoslavian biologist, recalled nothing of the ordeal. The remaining survivors, a Soviet woman scientist and a French psychiatrist, gave vivid, but dramatically different, descriptions of an afterlife.

The psychiatrist's experience was a literal nightmare. According to the reports, he was bestowed and had to be revived after he was frozen.

"He was in a highly agitated state, raving about the bloody skeleton of a dead relative who led him through a tunnel."

The Soviet woman described a much different experience. Reports said she spoke of being overcome with a sense of beauty, joy and comfort. She did not tell the presence of relatives, but of a loving, caring way. She was an atheist prior to the experiment but has since converted to Christianity. The fourth subject, an Albanian scientist, died.

German officials will neither confirm nor deny that the experiment ever took place and pulsated scientists and clergymen around the world are demanding an official investigation into the experiment.

Chilling eyewitness accounts of the beauty and horror beyond death!

Here's why Tyson's going to jail — and Willie went free!

I'm madder than Teddy Kennedy with a snootful of cheap Scotch over the Mike Tyson verdict — because Wee Willie Smith should be going to the slammer with him, for crying out loud.

And you know why Wee Willie walked and Big Mike didn't? Because tough-guy prosecutor Greg Garrison went after Tyson like Buster Douglas, that's why!

MY AMERICA

By ED ANGER

Let's face it. The only reason Wee Willie dodged a bullet was those Palm Beach cops decided to let him go from Planet X Mafia Lunch try to pin a rape rap on him.

This lunch pail couldn't have convicted Jack The Ripper, for Pete's sake. The Boston Strangler would have walked if this laugh of a lawyer had prosecuted him!

Handicapping Greg Garrison hasn't lost a case since the Beatles had a No. 1 hit and if he'll go after Wee Willie as ferociously as he went after Mike Tyson, a Kennedy would be behind bars for rape by gum.

What this country needs are some more down and dirty prosecutors like Gunslinger Greg to put lowlife rapists behind bars.

The latest figures from the National Institute of Criminal Statistics show 99.6 percent of men charged with rape are guilty. Same goes for sexual harassment.

Bottom line ... If Gunslinger Greg Garrison had been on the scene Clarence Thomas wouldn't be on the Supreme Court. Wee Willie Smith would be in jail and Pretty Boy Bill Clinton would have already dropped out of the presidential race.

Ed needs more tough-guy lawyers . . . to put the rapists behind bars!

WIDOW, 79, RESCUES WOMAN WHO FELL THROUGH THE ICE!

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

Though weak and on the verge of pneumonia, ailing 79-year-old widow Clare Fleming somehow found the strength to save her best friend's life after she broke through the ice of a river — by holding her head above water until help arrived!

'I held her head above the frozen river for 30 agonizing minutes'

When gutsy Clare saw 67-year-old Ann Cyran slumped unconscious beneath the half-frozen surface, she reached down over the bulkhead, grabbed a handful of her friend's hair and pulled her head out of the water.

"I'm not a hero," Clare said. "Ann and I have been friends for 40 years. We're like sisters. I had to help her. But I'd have done it for anyone."

It was a cold and bitter cold wal when Clare opened the door to let her three dogs have their morning run.

But instead of romping as they usually do, the dogs made a dash for the river that borders the backyard of her home on the Long Island, N.Y., hamlet of Shirley.

"All I held in was a nightgown a light robe and slippers but I went down to see what they were barking at," she recalled.

"I thought they had seen my neighbor's cat. When I looked over the bulkhead, I saw a gray, woolly head in the water. It was my friend Ann and she was unconscious.

"I leaned over the bulkhead, grabbed a handful of her hair, pulled her head up out of the water and held her there. I knew I had to get help, so I wrapped Ann's arms around a piling and ran screaming into the street. A neighbor heard me and called 911.

"I ran back to the river and Ann was under the water again. My neighbor came and the two of us tried to pull her out, but we couldn't do it. But then a fireman came and he pulled her out."

By the grace of God, Mastic

BRAVE: Clare Fleming shows where Ann Cyran fell into the frozen river. Woman temperatures since then have melted the ice, but it was a bone-numbing 20 degrees when the sibling hero Fleming performed her heroic rescue.

Beach fire chief Jim Falbo was in the area when he heard the 911 operator dispatch an ambulance. For Ann, his decision to go to the scene was the difference between life and death.

"When I got the woman out, she was unconscious and not breathing," Falbo explained. "So I gave her CPR and that brought her around. By the time the ambulance and the paramedics arrived and she was taken to the hospital, she was breathing again.

"It's hard to say, I was very surprised that the woman lived. It was about 24 degrees that morning and the water was freezing cold.

"But Fleming had been underwater for about a month if she hadn't gone to see what her dogs were barking at. There's no doubt in my mind that her friend would be dead now. Mrs. Fleming is a remarkable woman."

The Chief said Ann is recovering nicely and is expected to be released from the hospital in about a week.

Warning ■ parents: Exhaust fumes can kill kids riding in the back of pickup trucks!

Don't let your kids ride in the back of covered pickup trucks — it could kill them!

The children are in danger of carbon monoxide poisoning, according to researchers at the Virginia Mason Medical Center in Seattle. They studied 48 kids who went to the center for accidental poisoning, and found that 20 of them had been in the back of pickups with bed shells or covers.

"Many of the parents of the patients initially believed their children to be sleeping in the back of the pickup truck when, in fact, were unconscious due to carbon monoxide intoxication," a researcher said.

One of the 20 children died while another one suffered permanent brain damage.

TEACHER SHOOTS STUDENT TO DEATH — FOR MISSPELLING A WORD!

By SAMUEL PATTERSON
Special correspondent

Needy college professor Jon Frankel was such a crazed perfectionist he shot and killed one of his students for misspelling the word "doctor" in a sentence he wrote on the blackboard!

The 38-year-old English teacher has been charged with first-degree murder in the shooting death of tragic Bill Parnell but far from feeling any remorse, he allegedly told cops that he had every right to kill the student. "Because spelling errors are not only inexcusable they're a crime against language."

"I've been a police officer for 23 years and I've seen a lot of murders but nothing, and I mean nothing, can compare with this," Police Lt. John Daimler told reporters.

"Jon Frankel doesn't look strong enough or mean enough to hurt a fly," he continued. "But when Mr. Parnell misspelled 'doctor' while writing on the blackboard the professor went crazy."

Witnesses said he jumped up and down like a kid having a temper tantrum, whipped a .38-caliber revolver out of his coat pocket and blew the student's head off.

ENRAGED TEACHER Jon Frankel, left, went crazy when freshman Bill Parnell spelled "doctor" with an "e" instead of an "o" and shot the boy to death. At right, Lt. John Daimler takes Frankel into custody.

"Some of the students who were in the classroom tried to run but Frankel forced them back to their desks at the point of his gun. Believe it or not, he continued his English lesson as if nothing had happened.

"He seemed genuinely surprised when officers arrived at the school to arrest him."

News of the terrible shooting stunned Frankel's friends and colleagues, one of whom described him as being "as kind and gentle a person as you'd ever want to meet."

The administration at New Zealand's Auckland Business College, where the shooting took place, were just as shocked. They issued a statement calling the murder of Parnell, 21, "an outrage and a tragedy beyond measure."

Police said the drama unfolded during Frankel's 10 a.m. freshman English class.

The professor reportedly asked Parnell to write a sentence on the blackboard and as a tragic lapse of concentration, the young man wrote "Tomorrow I'm going to see a doctor" instead of "Tomorrow I'm going to see a doctor."

Frankel hit the ceiling, said the cop.

And within a matter of seconds, Parnell was dead.

The professor remains behind bars in lieu of $100,000 bail and to date has denied all interview requests.

But Phil Lankton, his court appointed attorney, issued a prepared statement from him that read: "I firmly believe that the abuse of the English language cannot be tolerated and if that makes me a criminal, so be it."

Lt. Daimler said, "I have a great appreciation for education but there is such a thing as taking it too far."

Cons can keep pet kitties in their cells, says prison

Swiss prison officials have learned they can keep even the most hardened cons on the straight and narrow — by letting them keep kitty-cats in their cells!

"A cat's quiet and peaceful nature rubs off on even the most lonely, bitter men," said prison superintendent Alois Fehr.

The only known case that has shocked fellow wardens was the escape of Hans Peter Kaufmann, who fled his cell by climbing down a rope made from bedsheets — with his cat Mitzi in his arms.

I gave her my love — she gave me AIDS!

AWARD-WINNING SYNDICATED ADVICE COLUMNIST

Dear Dotti: Two years ago I found a homeless young woman cowering in some bushes behind the church I attend and in an act of compassion I took her into my own home.

I bought her some new clothes, gave her a place to stay and gave her food to eat. I even used my influence to help her get a job. As time went on our relationship blossomed and eventually turned romantic. I thought everything was great until I went to my doctor for a yearly checkup — and found out I have AIDS. I have since learned that my girl friend knew she had AIDS when we met but never breathed a word to me. I'm at my wit's end, Dotti. What should I do? — Desperate in New Jersey

Dear Desperate: It's a little late for you to be asking for my advice but I will tell you this much: Anybody who goes to bed with a stranger nowadays (ESPECIALLY how a dumb trick!

Should a college grad take a job flipping burgers?

Dear Dotti: Do you see anything wrong with flipping hamburgers for a living? I just graduated from a highly respected college with a degree in business but jobs are really scarce and I'm doing some serious thinking about taking a job with a fast-food restaurant just to tide me over. Unfortunately, all my friends think this job is beneath me and are telling me I would be crazy to take it. What do you think? — Undecided in Tempe

Dear Undecided: There's no such thing as a bad job when the economy is the way it is now and you'd be a fool to turn down any work you can find. Tell your so-called friends to eat dirt, and — and flip burgers until you can find something better.

Women are driving me to a life of pot and booze!

Dear Dotti: I'm a man in my mid-30s and I haven't had a steady girlfriend since high school. The last relationship I had didn't work out because it was with my brother's fiancee and he found out what was going on and broke us up. I've tried to find other girls to have fun with, but even the ones who are drunk and ugly want to go home with me. Most of the time I end up sitting at home smoking pot and drinking beer. I have nothing but hard luck with women and it's not my fault. Dotti, do what you can to get a woman? — Lonely in Cleveland

Dear Lonely: Has it ever occurred to you that you can't find a woman because you're a beer-drinking, pot-smoking, no-account bum? If it hasn't, it should — so

Dotti will answer your letters — and tell it like it is. But write to her, c/o Weekly World News, 600 South East Coast Ave., Lantana, Fla. 33464.

Dear Mad in Abilene: I didn't say you were fat. I said you had a "two-story" behind!

Dear Horrified Gal in Grand Forge: I don't care what your boyfriend says! The bedroom is no place for plastic explosives — regardless of the shape!

Dear Numbercruncher in Alsip: If I caught a shoe salesman looking up my dress I'd ask to see something in a steel-toed boot — and kick the simple bejesus out!

Dear Curious Teen in Midland: Where I was 24. Why?

Dear Desperate in Peoria: If I've told you once I've told you a thousand times — go die!

Dear Angry Girl in Plainfield: Your mom is a worm — and so are you!

It's perfectly healthy to pick your nose and eat it!

Dear Dotti: You published a letter from a woman who complained about her boyfriend picking his nose and eating the boogers in public. You gave a smart-alecky answer but if you had done your homework, you would have known that "nose pellets," as you so eloquently call them, are full of vitamins and protein and could benefit anyone's diet. I'm a physician and I know what I'm talking about. — Doctor in Scottsdale

Dear Doctor: There in all the boogers you like, perhaps! The only "finger foods" you'll catch me eating are hors d'oeuvres, pizza and fried chicken!

Ask the Countess

Why won't Elvis Presley come out of hiding?

Dear Countess: I'm one of millions of Americans who happen to believe that Elvis Presley faked his death in 1977 and is still alive and well today.

If that is the case, Countess, when, if ever, will The King come out of hiding? Please let his fans know something. We've been waiting so long. — Wondering in Memphis

Dear Wondering: As much as I'd like to help you and the many others who have written, I have no intention of getting into Elvis' private life without his permission. However I can tell you that Elvis is happier than he ever

Dear Countess: My fiancee and I have been engaged for almost two years and have been living together for the last six months. Recently, I've been having second thoughts about getting married. I'm not sure if I'm ready to settle down and I'm afraid I'll miss out on the single life. Should I break off the engagement? — Confused in Tempe

Dear Confused: Yes, you should break off the engagement. Not because you're afraid to settle down, but because you're afraid to commit yourself to your fiancee. Marriage is a two-way street and you're not ready to travel it. Tell her the truth and let her get on with her life.

Dear Countess: I'm a 19-year-old college student and I've been dating a girl for about a year. Recently, I've been seeing another girl behind my girlfriend's back. I'm afraid that if my girlfriend finds out about the other girl, she'll break up with me. What should I do? — Cheating in Chicago

Dear Cheating: You should stop cheating on your girlfriend. You're playing with fire and you're going to get burned. Tell the other girl to get lost and concentrate on your girlfriend. If you don't, you're going to lose her.

Dear Countess: I'm a 25-year-old woman who has been married for three years. My husband is a wonderful man and I love him very much. The problem is that I'm very attracted to another man. I've been seeing him behind my husband's back for the last six months. I'm afraid that if my husband finds out about this "other man" he will really beat them. Baby bakes to death in car!

Florida mom left infant in vehicle when she went to work, say cops

By DICK DONOVAN Staff writer

Convicted child-abuser Patricia Mudd was back behind bars again, this time, cops say, for leaving her infant son in a tightly closed car — until he baked to death!

Pitiful 7-month-old Trevor Mudd was locked in his mother's car for eight agonizing hours while she worked as assistant manager of a Jacksonville, Fla., restaurant.

By the time she finally went to him, little Trevor had stopped breathing and his body temperature had soared to above 102 degrees.

The 24-year-old mother frantically summoned an emergency rescue unit which rushed Trevor to the nearest hospital. But the help came too late. The tot was pronounced dead on arrival.

Mrs. Mudd, the wife of a Navy seaman, originally told cops she had left Trevor in her car for only 15 minutes. She later changed her story, saying she left him in the car during her eight-hour shift because she hadn't been able to find a babysitter.

"It's a tragic case," police Sgt. Gus Cartano said. "The temperature that day got up pretty high. I don't know how hot it got inside the car, but it was obviously enough to kill the baby."

In 1986 Mrs. Mudd, then living in Oak Harbor, Wash., was convicted of assaulting her 2-month-old daughter and served a four-month sentence. Her daughter, who suffered three fractured ribs and numerous bruises, was put up for adoption, as was another daughter she had when she was 17.

Cartano said the mother is being held with out bond in the Duval County Jail.

Priest chases evil spirit from woman's fridge!

By BEATRICE DEXTER

REFRIGERATOR EXORCISM!

Desperate housewife Diane Kent called in a priest to perform an exorcism — on her refrigerator!

The widowed Buffalo, N.Y., mother of two says her icebox has always glowed in the night, made frightening noises and deliberately spoiled her food. But when she [illegible] the refrigerator door one day last month and the machine clobbered her with four shelf-loads of food, she knew for sure that an evil spirit inhabited her appliance.

"The shelves just collapsed for no reason and I was hit by a big mayonnaise jar, a bowl of salad, a container of soup and lots of other stuff," Mrs. Kent, 39, recalled.

"Then the freezer compartment flew open and heavy, frozen blocks of meat smashed me on the head. I wound up bleeding and bruised and I said to myself, 'This is no normal refrigerator.'"

Mrs. Kent bought the appliance last year at a thrift shop because it looked almost new.

She noticed the minute she plugged it in that it made strange, humping noises but it got cold right away and its light went on when she opened the door, so she figured it was basically sound.

She first began to suspect it was possessed several nights later when she awoke and went to the refrigerator for a snack.

"I heard this whining, whimpering noise coming from the refrigerator," Mrs. Kent recalled.

"The thing had a glowing purple light streaming out from around the door of the freezer and the food compartment. When I opened the door, everything was normal-looking inside — but the whimpering changed to a low, nasty growl."

Within weeks, Mrs. Kent's frozen icebox was relentlessly spoiling food. Butter would melt inside the dairy compartment, milk would go bad in hours and lettuce would wilt after just a few minutes. But other food would be preserved hotwatly. The stalwart housewife says:

After the refrigerator attacked her six weeks ago, Mrs. Kent called her church. The church paper did a feature article on her possessed icebox, and priest Father Joseph O'Connor contacted her and offered to try to oust the evil spirit that inhabited the appliance.

Last week the priest went to Mrs. Kent's home and performed an exorcism ritual in front of her icebox. The worried widow is hopeful her refrigerator troubles are over but she says she won't believe it until several months have passed without an incident.

"One false move out of that machine and I'm going to send it to the dump," Mrs. Kent says firmly. "I don't want to be tortured by that demon anymore and I don't want anyone else to go through what I've gone through either."

WHAT A MESS! Desperate Diane Kent holds a carton of eggs smashed by the evil spirit that inhabited her refrigerator.

FATHER Joseph O'Connor performed the exorcism ritual that drove the evil spirit out of Mrs. Kent's refrigerator.

Teen chops up date when he discovers SHE'S really a HE!

By JOE BERGER
Staff writer

Smooth-talking teen Jason Dreslik picked up a sweet young thing in a bar, hustled her off to his apartment, then slashed her to ribbons — when he found out the luscious lady was really a man!

The hotheaded high school dropout admitted he "carved the guy up like leg of lamb" after removing the make-believe hellion's frilly clothes and finding more than he'd bargained for.

A jury in New York City convicted Dreslik, 18, of attempted murder and first degree assault.

He could be sentenced to up to 25 years in prison.

"The defendant really did a number on this fellow and he seemed kind of proud of it," said New York City Prosecutor James Hubert, who refused to release the victim's name. The hair-raising tale began last April Fool's Day when the teenage thug wandered into a seedy Manhattan bar frequented by drag queens and sex-swap swingers, lawmen said.

"Mr Dreslik lived with his girlfriend, but she was out of town and he was out to have a little fun," Hubert told a reporter.

"He struck up a conversation with a transvestite, and they talked about everything from off-track betting to a mutual friend who worked at the same restaurant where Mr Dreslik worked." Eventually, the eager twosome headed to the apartment in Elmhurst, N.Y., and started removing the "lady's" clothes. That's when he got the shock of his life.

"He ran into the kitchen, got a big knife and started stabbing the guy in the face and chest," Prosecutor Hubert said.

"One wound slashed his cheek open from the corner of his mouth all the way up to his ear."

The bloodcurdling shriek spilled into the apartment house hallway and a horrified neighbor called the cops.

During his two-week trial, Dreslik testified he cut the hapless makeup artist to ribbons in self-defense.

But a jury deliberated less than three hours before finding him guilty of attempting to kill the unidentified female fatale.

Hubby takes wife's corpse on camping trip, say cops

By DICK DONOVAN/Staff writer

Love-sick hubby Rodney Dotson shot his wife Lisa to death. Then he took in a movie and went on a weekend camping trip — with her corpse!

That's the grisly scenario cops outlined in convincing a Campbell County grand jury to indict the 19-year-old Virginian on a charge of first-degree murder in the September 18th slaying of his 19-year-old wife of less than two years.

"It was basically a domestic thing," Chief Deputy J.M. Harris said. "Dotson and his wife had been arguing for a couple of days about a divorce and he shot her. Then he put her in his truck and went camping. We began looking for the truck of the two parents reported that they were worried that something had happened to their daughter."

Harris said the truck was spotted and stopped two days later. But Lisa's body wasn't immediately discovered.

"In the beginning, we had no reason to search the truck," Harris said. "But after we questioned him, we became suspicious and took a look. We found her under a pretty heavy testimony presented at a pre-liminary hearing. Dotson told detectives he went into a state of shock after shooting his wife in the head during a Friday night argument in their home in Evington.

He said he then put her body on the floor of his truck, covered it with blankets, then spent the weekend camping along the Blue Ridge Parkway and going to a movie.

In addition to first-degree murder, Dotson is charged with the use of a firearm in the commission of a felony. He is being held without bond in the MAN FRIES HIS BRAIN — WITH ELECTRIC SUICIDE HELMET!

By DICK DONOVAN
Staff writer

When troubled dad Al Kleton decided he could no longer go on living, he snuffed out his life in the most chilling and diabolical way imaginable — he fried his brain with a homemade electric death helmet!

The unemployed 50-year-old laborer borrowed his son's construction hardhat and lined it with electrical contacts. Then he put it on, plugged it in and flipped a switch that sent a lethal charge of current surging into each side of his head.

Sadly, son Mark found Al's body sprawled on the kitchen floor of his tiny apartment in Portsmouth, England. Though he said his father had been acting strangely the suicide took police totally by surprise.

"I really understand why he would do something like that," Mark said. "He had money worries but it didn't seem to be the source of his problems.

"He brought us things from his apartment — ceiling lights and a set of keys. I thought that was very odd. He asked me for a hardhat and I gave him a plastic one."

Cops said Al had left a note for his estranged wife, Nina. Mark said he found his father's body after he became worried about not seeing his dad. When he saw the note, he turned off the main power supply and went inside the darkened room.

"First I searched his bedroom," Mark said. "Then I went into the kitchen and my foot touched something on the floor. When I reached down and felt it, I realized it was my father's leg. I ran outside shouting for help."

A coroner's inquest confirmed that the bizarre death helmet had sent a deadly charge of current surging into both sides of Al's head.

"It's very sad that someone who didn't wish to live any longer would choose to end his life in such a dramatic way," the coroner said.

Cops thwart teen's mass murder plot!

Boy, 16, planned to gun down kids on playground

God only knows how many lives were saved when cops arrested a 16-year-old schoolboy for a minor shooting violation — and uncovered his savage plot to gun down children as they frolicked on a playground!

Cops in Houston, Texas, [illegible] the [illegible]d boy and [illegible]d fully-loaded AK-47 semiautomatic assault rifle he [illegible] use in carrying out his chilling scheme of random mass murder.

They also have the boy's personal diary of death in which he recorded his detailed plan for an armed assault on a school playground.

The case is reminiscent of the infamous day in August, 1966, when troubled 24-year-old ex-Marine Charles Whitman barricaded himself atop a 307-foot high tower on the University of Texas campus in Austin.

Armed with a rifle, a shotgun, three handguns and 700 rounds of ammo, Whitman gunned down 46 people, killing 16, in a 96-minute rampage of madness that earned him a place in infamy as the Texas Tower Sniper.

Arising papers found in the teenager's home were several hundred pages of rambling, hand-scrawled notes listing previous mass murderers and the prison terms given to convicted killers.

"The notes are very detailed," Juvenile Division Sgt. Harold McAnulty said. "Some of them are in diary form and some are in diary form. No names are mentioned, but the notes indicate he had a desire to kill children.

"He's one of the scariest kids I've ever been around," McAnulty said. "He definitely exhibits the makings of someone who could carry out what he'd written. He even had a map on how to attack the school grounds."

The boy was taken into custody by a patrolman answering a complaint that someone fired a shot in a residential neighborhood. The officer spotted a rifle on a balcony and knocked on the door. It was opened by a boy wearing camouflage Army fatigues who readily admitted to firing the rifle.

"The juvenile stated that he had shot at someone and that he intended to shoot at other children," McAnulty said. "He said the gun made too much noise so he stopped.

"I honestly believe he stopped so he wouldn't be stopped. He was crying and for help.

"There were about 15 children playing in the street and there were still 29 bullets in the gun. If he had wanted to kill someone there he could have done it. But he didn't."

McAnulty said the boy underwent psychiatric evaluation and is now in a county mental hospital.

"I have no idea how long he'll be there," he added. "But I hope he gets the help he needs. The help I believe he was asking for when he fired that gun. If he hadn't been stopped that day, I think police believe down the road he would have carried out his plan."

Simple plan for a happier, healthier marriage

If your marriage is good, it can be better and if it's failing, it can be saved — with a very simple intimacy plan.

"Intimacy will strengthen a relationship and make it more adaptable to life's stresses," says marriage expert Dr. Gordon J. Chelune.

And Dr. S.M. Waring, who with Dr. Chelune completed a study on intimacy in marriage, added, "The evidence clearly shows that if you enhance intimacy you can have both a happier and healthier marriage and a happier and healthier life."

Here is their plan to increase intimacy in your marriage.

1. Affection. Let your spouse know you value him or her. Compliment how your mate looks. And be physically affectionate with a kiss, a touch or a hug.

2. Keeping your marriage number one. Your relationship should be your top priority, taking precedence over children, family, friends, career and outside activities.

3. Expressiveness — sharing your thoughts, beliefs and attitudes. Tell your mate how you think and how you feel about every aspect of living — work, world affairs, anything.

4. Compatibility. Recognize your basic differences and talk about them.

5. Conflict resolution — handling differences of opinion. Arguments and criticism lead to distance but mutual definiteness and respect for each other can resolve these differences in a positive way.

6. Sexuality. Many people associate sexuality with intimacy, but it's not one of the most important components, say the doctors. What IS important is that your sex life be satisfying for both of you.

7. Relationships with others. It's important for each spouse to have his or her own circle of friends. Rather than being threatening, a diverse group of friends can help a marriage.

8. Self-esteem as a couple. When you compare your relationship to that of other couples, you should feel you're about the same — or better.

PET SNAKE SLITHERS 2,000 MILES HOME!

Boa lost on Arizona trip in 1990 makes it back to Florida 18 months later!

By MICKEY McGUIRE

A one-eyed pet boa constrictor named Julius Squeezer escaped from a motor home in Arizona and somehow managed to slither all the way back to its owners' home in Florida — more than 2,000 miles away!

Bill and Robin Kelly are completely baffled by the snake's incredible journey but their 3-year-old daughter Megan bubbled over with joy when she found her lost pet coiled on the porch of her home near Ocala, Fla.

"This is amazing! Absolutely amazing!" said 31-year-old Robin. "We were vacationing in our motor home in Flagstaff, Ariz., when Julius escaped from his cage. That was in August 1990.

"We searched high and low for him, almost tore the motor home apart and even stayed an extra two days in Flagstaff looking for him.

"After that, we just knew we'd never see him again. Megan cried for days. That's when Merrily gave up with her. Losing him really washed out our vacation.

"Then, almost 18 months later, there he is on the porch, alive and well and as happy as a clam at high tide. He must be because of his eye injury. A cut scratched him so badly that the right eye had to be surgically removed in 1988.

So the family hasn't the slightest doubt that the visitor is Julius.

"I cried a lot when we couldn't find Julius and we had to come home without him," Megan said.

"I prayed every night that God would keep him safe and not let him get hurt. Now I know that God really did hear my prayers because He brought Julius home."

"Daddy ran at early and we called and told him that Julius was back.

"But he didn't believe it. When I told him that he had only one eye he said it just had to be Julius. But I already knew that."

Bill said he's talked to a snake expert in Miami who believes Julius must have been hiding somewhere inside the motor home all the time. But Bill quickly inserted that theory for a loop. "I told him that the motor home wasn't mine," Bill explained. "I had only rented it for our vacation. About two months after we returned it, the people I had rented it from drove it to Michigan and sold it. That was more than 10 months before Julius came home."

Though her parents and the experts are scratching their heads over Julius Squeezer's incredible 2,200-mile journey home, little Megan couldn't care less how he did it.

"People think snakes are awful, but they aren't," she said. "Julius Squeezer is the best pet in the world and I'm really happy he's safe and home again. I just hope he

MR. BIG

He's the world's most gentle giant

He's a 7-foot-5-inch 451-lb. tower of strength

By JOE BERGER

In the horror flick Humongous, easygoing Garry Robbins played a diabolical dog-gobbling mutant. On TV's Twilight Zone, he was a fire-breathing demon. And in the berserk, blood-thirsty world of pro wrestling, he's head-busting Paul Bunyan, the Canadian Giant.

But whether he's battering bad guys in the ring or terrorizing terriers on the silver screen, the awesome actor-grappler always towers above the crowd — because he stands 7 feet, 5 inches tall and weighs a whopping 451 pounds.

"I do get a lot of attention, even when I'm just walking down the street," jovial Garry rumbles in a voice so deep it could come from a cave.

"I can do a lot of things but when you're that big, it's awful hard to hide."

The colossal karate champ blended in at his weighing just 7 pounds, 4 ounces and seemed destined to be a normal size till a childhood diving accident crushed his chest, set his pituitary ablaze — and turned him into a hung king kid.

"I shot up 13 inches in a year when I was 12 and I didn't stop growing till I was just past that," said gargantuan Garry. "I got so big the boys my age wouldn't have anything to do with me and the all-star 14-year-olds all tried to beat me up.

"Then I started playing football and I was so good and already certainly wanted to be big there."

But the 5'8" Californian's, Hollywood, that wasn't quite what was his life was changed till a talent agent hauled him to Reno as a nightclub bouncer and got him the title role in Humongous.

Out of the blue, good-natured Garry found himself headlining around a make-believe island in a mountain of makeup, terrifying teenagers and brandishing an outfit of shark's fins.

The big movie gig, by Hollywood standards, lasted what the hey — the shoestring budget ran out before the script called for Garry's character to die.

Since then, jumbo Garry's had roles in three more movies and lots of TV shows, playing everything from a 10-year-old demon to an ill-fated Alaskan polar bear. And between acting gigs, he treats the world as his mat, with his kickin' Paul Bunyan, a former ring villain turned virtuous.

"It's better being the good guy than the bad guy," allows the gentle Canadian. "I used to have too many old ladies hitting me over the head."

Paul Garry's a giant guy in real life. The thumb that could crush would rather cradle or caress.

"I love the kids. I really do," he says. And he proves it by making visits to hospital children's wards as the all-smiling lumberjack, enchanting the hearts of young fans too sick to make it to ringside.

The big monster also founded an organization that has raised thousands of dollars to aid in the search for missing kids.

"Garry would give you the shirt off his back," said a pal. "He doesn't have an enemy in the world."

But if you happen to be a plate of steak and potatoes, get out of Big's way.

"I have to eat 10 meals a day just to keep going, and I'm not kidding," the ravenous holy warrior told a reporter. "In fact, I finished off five

Oven timer stores off chicken bandits

Two bumbling bandits charged into a fried chicken joint, pointed pistols at a counterman and demanded money — and then ran like scared schoolkids when an oven timer went off in the kitchen!

"They must have thought the buzzer on the cooker was a police alarm or something because it terrified the hell out of them," tribbed chicken salesman Martin Stalder told reporters in Geneva, Switzerland.

"They swaggered in all rough and tough, but when the timer went off telling me the chicken was done they turned all white and scampered out of here like somebody was shooting at them."

At last report, the clumsy desperadoes were still at large.

Teenager blows his brains out — over Nintendo game!

[illegible] ALEXANDER

A terrified teenager blew [illegible] brains out [illegible] cops caught [illegible] using a teacher's [illegible] credit card to buy a Nintendo game.

"I [illegible] going to jail," screamed Gary Gondolfo, 17, seconds before he put a pistol to his head and fired.

Hours before the senseless suicide, the tech and high school pal Derik Glover, 16, had been nabbed by store security officers as Gondolfo tried to use the stolen card at a shopping center in Haverhill, Mass., cops said.

"The Visa card belonged to a teacher at Haverhill High," said police Sgt. Robert Smith. "He had reported it stolen two days earlier."

When store security guards escorted them into an office, Gondolfo whipped out a gun, pointed it at the guards and fled with his buddy.

Cops spotted the two teens sitting in a parked car several hours later and approached them with guns drawn.

"We shouted for them to get out of the car with their hands up, but they didn't reply," Sgt. Smith said.

"Next thing we heard was a shot and Glover screamed that Gondolfo had killed himself."

He quickly disarmed the mortally wounded teen but couldn't revive him with CPR.

The dead teen also had used the credit card to buy merchandise earlier at a mall in nearby Danvers cops said.

"Chances are the boy wouldn't have spent more than a night in jail, if that, because of his age," said a detective. "Maybe he had seen too many movies about jail life and didn't want any part of it. We'll never know now."

No charges were filed against Glover.

She's had 3 kids — and she's only 17!

SWEDISH GIRL IS THE WORLD'S YOUNGEST SURROGATE MOM!

Pretty teenager Christina Olsson just turned 17 years old, but she's pregnant and about to become a surrogate mother — for the fourth time!

The youngster says her parents have given permission for the pregnancies because the $10,000 Christina is paid each time she has a baby helps support her and her ailing mom and dad.

"It was my father's idea to do this," says the angelic-looking teen from Malmo, Sweden, who expects her next baby the end of April. "He heard about surrogate mothers earning good money and he asked me if I would help our family out by going through a pregnancy. I was only 13 years old, but I was mature for my age so I agreed.

"After that it seemed a waste not to have me pregnant and earning money. So after a few months rest between babies, I go back in the clinic and get pregnant again by artificial insemination."

By BEATRICE DEXTER
(International)

PRETTY Christina still maintains an active social life

Christina, who is a senior in high school, manages to keep up with her studies in spite of her baby-making. And her social life is relatively normal, she says.

The teenager says she likes helping childless couples have the baby they want and enjoys helping her parents pay the bills.

"My dad is on disability and my mother has a bad heart and can't work," Christina explains. "So every penny I earn goes toward keeping my family going.

"To me having a baby is nothing. I'm healthy. I feel great during my pregnancies, and I find what I'm doing very personally rewarding. In fact, I intend to keep having surrogate pregnancies until I marry and have my own kids."

Christina's dispute "is legal in Sweden where kids as young as 15 years old can marry with parental permission. But according to news coverage of the teenager's surrogacy, Christina is the first young girl to have out as a rented womb.

Experts fear the pregnancies could damage the girl psychologically by making it difficult for her to bond with her own children when she has them later on. They point out that teenage pregnancies carry added health risks and worry about the effects on her sexual life.

But Christina says she's had no problems stemming from her pregnancies and that she has many friends and even boyfriends.

"When I'm not real pregnant, I date a couple of guys," she says.

"They understand what I'm doing and don't seem to mind. They know I've never had sex and that the baby belongs to someone else.

"And as for the people who don't approve of what I'm doing, that's okay. There's not the types I would select as friends anyway."

"I HAD my first baby when I was 13," says surrogate mom Christina Olsson, who's expecting her fourth child in April

Every person photographed by antique camera dies within days!

By JOE BERGER

Staff writer

Unsuspecting sister Franz Beck bought a beat-up old camera at a yard sale and started snapping pics of friends and kinfolk right and left — then watched in horror as every single person he'd photographed died an agonizing death!

"That camera is an instrument of the Devil, no doubt about it," gasped shell-shocked Franz, 66.

"I took photos of 11 people with that damn thing, including some poor guy who was passing by and just happened to get in the picture. And within days they'd all died in the ugliest ways imaginable.

"That's no coincidence, my friend — that's a curse."

Since November, the grief-ridden grandpa from Essen, Germany has seen his friends and family members die in traffic crashes, one burn up in a fire, one slowly succumb to death on a beach and two drown in into where their fishing boat capsized.

And when Franz tracked down the only stranger in his photos, he learned the ill-fated fellow had died of a brain hemorrhage at age 36 — ten days after the picture was taken.

"My loved ones have been wiped out and my buddies, too — all because of that damned camera," said the stubbed schoolteacher. "Now the paranormal people at the university are looking at the thing. And when they're done with it, I hope they smash it to smithereens — because as far as I'm concerned, that camera came straight from Satan himself."

Flabbergasted Franz was looking through a photo album, mourning the loss of his wife, three children, a cousin and five friends when the truth hit him like a knife through the heart. These poor folks had all perished just hours after Franz photographed them with his ghastly camera of death.

"Then I started thinking, I the heartsick widower recalled. "That's when I spotted this guy in the background of a picture I took of my wife just before their last blow-up. I found out his name was Friedrich Hafner ... and that he'd keeled over dead the day after the picture was taken."

Flustered Franz visited the family who'd sold him the camera and learned they had no idea how the spine-chilling thing ended up in their attic.

"So I took the camera to these people in Berlin who study stuff like curses and the supernatural, and they couldn't wait to get their hands on it," said the rattled grandpa. "I told them to examine it all they want — and then blast it back to hell where it came from."

High-tech sneakers will ruin your feet!

Gaudy, high-tech sneakers are actually bad for your feet, a new study shows.

"They're safety hazards, rather than protective devices," concludes the researchers from Montreal's Concordia University.

The study found athletes wearing state-of-the-art footwear are likely to suffer more injuries to their feet than folks wearing cheap sneaks. That's because expensive sneakers have — much cushioning that wearers ignore their feet and don't even know it, playing on and making

Man was so-o-o drunk he had four flat tires — and didn't know it

. . . SAY COPS!

By [redacted]
Staff writer

Julio Salgado was so drunk WHEN he got busted by cops that he had no idea he was driving with four flat tires, authorities said.

"He was weaving so bad he was almost sideways!" said Sgt. Gary Horton of the Erie County Sheriff's department in Buffalo, N.Y. "We could hear him coming too. I mean when you have four flat tires you make a lot of noise."

Salgado, 74, was on his way home from a long night at a bar and got lost, according to police.

"He told us that he didn't know how he got in Buffalo because he was on his way home in Dunkirk, 45 minutes away," Sgt. Horton said.

Unfortunately the dizzy driver also didn't know that he ran three stop signs and went right through one of the many police sobriety checkpoints in Erie county, Sgt. Horton said. He said two patrolmen actually flag our because Salgado was still going after he drove through the checkpoint.

Salgado registered a whopping .27 on a sobriety test, well beyond the legal limit for drunk driving, Sgt. Horton said.

"I guess if you're that drunk you could be driving a cardboard box and not know it," he joked.

Salgado was charged with driving while intoxicated along with other moving violations. He faces a year in jail, a $300 to $500 fine and at least a six-month driving restriction, cops said.

"I hope he had a good time at the bar," Sgt. Horton said. "We're still wondering how he SODA STRAWS PREVENT CAVITIES, SAYS STUDY!

Drinking soda with a straw helps prevent cavities, according to a new study.

Using a straw for those sugar-loaded sodas and fruit juices stops your teeth from cavities, said Dr. William Keating, spokesman for the Chicago-based Academy of General Dentistry. "The sugar and acid from the drink set away at your teeth," Dr. Keating said. "With a straw, the drink doesn't come in as much contact with your teeth, and less damage can occur."

Today's women have got it made!

Housework 100 years ago was LIVING HELL!

By BRUCE STEVENS / Special correspondent

Compared with work done by the American housewife of 100 years ago, today's woman lives the life of a pampered princess!

"Housework has become vastly easier and more comfortable today," says historian Dr. Susan Strasser. "One hundred years ago, a woman's time was consumed by hard manual labor."

Among the daily chores a housewife faced in the 1800s were chopping wood, lugging heavy pailfuls of water into the house, emptying chamber pots, cleaning with 10-pound fireirons, and making all the family food from scratch.

Though gas stoves and lights, electricity and indoor plumbing were available in the 1890s, only very wealthy families could afford them.

Today we can turn on a furnace or cooking stove with the flick of a switch. But in the 1800s, heat for cooking or comfort in the average home came from wood or coal burning stoves and fireplaces.

"The woman usually did the final chopping and she brought the wood or coal into the house," said Dr. Strasser, author of Never Done - A History of American Housework.

And without hot and cold running water of today, the housewife of 100 years ago had to fetch water from the nearest stream or well.

"Most women had to haul every drop of water used for cooking, dish washing, bathing themselves and their families, laundry and house cleaning," she said. "Heavy work even in the spring or fall, it became unbearable in summer's heat, and in winter women often had to crack ice to get to their frigid water supplies."

Just washing dishes, a three times a day task, required two tubfuls of heated water, one for washing, the other rinsing.

Laundry meant five tubs — one for boiling, two for soak, one for rinsing and another for bluing (adding a blue dye that kept whites white).

Unlike permanent press clothing we all have today, everything had to be ironed in the 1800s. The housewife spent a whole day at the ironing board every week, pressing each piece in an cumbersome fashion - each of which could weigh up to 10 pounds.

"The women of 50 served every thing. Their families were from eight sheets, and starching was a new of ending process," said Dr. Strasser.

Fighting the soot from kerosene lamps and coal or wood-burning stoves was another gargantuan job in the 1890s.

Taking care of a coal stove took almost an hour a day. And it had to be filled three times of coal and ashes emptied.

"It was heavy work, with 250 pounds of new coal put in the stove every six days. 25 pounds sifted out of the ashes and more than 10 pounds of kindling," said Dr. Strasser.

And while today we buy convenience foods at the supermarket, the housewife of a century ago came home from the store with the ingredients she had to fill. Even if she bought dried chickens, they had to be plucked.

The woman of the house also had the task of preparing her own baby foods.

And besides all this, she kept busy roasting and grinding green coffee, grinding and sifting whole spices, cutting and pounding lump or loaf sugar, melting heavy flour, soaking oatmeal, shelling nuts, grinding cocoa shells for chocolate or cocoa, seeding raisins, making and nurturing yeast and drying herbs.

KITCHEN work was a grueling chore 100 years ago, before today's automated appliances.

Pigeon poop plagues town

Hapless residents of tiny Tefren, Brazil, carry umbrellas in even the balmiest of weather — to fend off a steady downpour of poop produced by the city's thousands of pesky pigeons!

"Without our umbrellas, we'd be constantly wiping pigeon droppings from our hair and eyes," groused store owner Oswaldo Ferreiras.

"Some people want to poison them but the city fathers say it's important to live in peace with everyone — even the birds."

Hundreds attend funeral for a dog — 50 years after it died!

Hundreds of people gathered for a special funeral service honoring a dog named Shep, a pooch so faithful that he waited 5½ years in a train station for his dead master to return.

Residents of Fort Benton, [illegible] attended the touching ceremony marking the 50-year anniversary of Shep's death and recounted his amazing story.

According to local legend, Shep's vigil began in 1936, when the pup watched a robber running his sheep-herder owner's body being loaded onto a train at the Fort Benton station.

Shep then began his lonely wait, hoping his master would return on the next train.

The dog met the four Great Northern passenger trains that rolled into the station each day, looking for his beloved master.

Shep died on Jan. 12, 1942, when he fell beneath

Man catches polio from a dirty diaper!

By JACK ALEXANDER
Staff writer

A luckless bachelor is paralyzed and being kept alive by a machine after he contracted crippling polio — from changing his niece's soiled diaper.

The 18-year-old man, who wasn't identified, apparently changed the infant's diaper just a few days after the toddler had been immunized against polio with the sugar lump vaccine.

The chances of this happening were 1,000,000 to 1, doctors said.

"Children shed the polio virus in their feces for weeks after getting the vaccine," said Dr. Louis Lerian, the neurologist caring for the polio victim. "Though it rarely happens, a tiny bit of the weakened virus from the child could revert to its original potent form, capable of causing the disease."

Nine days after changing the diaper, the unlucky uncle developed mysterious symptoms and was rushed to a hospital in London, England.

His lungs are now paralyzed and he is being kept alive on a ventilator. Doctors fear he will never completely recover and will be partially paralyzed for the rest of his life.

"This unfortunate man has been terribly unlucky. There is no specific treatment available," said Dr. Martin Wale, a consultant at Southampton General Hospital. "It is essential that adults who have slipped through the net should get themselves immunized against polio, as this can't happen again. This poor man obviously had not been immunized against polio as a child."

CHIMPANZEES INVADE TOWN!

Residents of Arbeitgern, Germany, got the shock of their lives when their picturesque little town was invaded — by a band of mischievous chimps!

The hairy rascals escaped after escaping from a private zoo and immediately ransacked garages, ran across roofs — and nipped at anybody who came too close.

"These little guys gave us the most excitement we've had in our little town in years," said a policeman after cops finally managed to round up the pesky primates.

Coat zipper kills 7-year-old boy!

A heartbreaking tragedy took the life of a 7-year-old boy, who accidentally hanged himself by his coat zipper as he climbed through the window of his playhouse.

"What a horrible waste of a young life," said a police officer at the scene. "One minute the boy is playing, laughing and having fun. The next minute he is dead from a freak accident that wouldn't happen again in a thousand years."

Tenacious youngster Russell "Rusty" Smith was wearing a windbreaker zipped up to the neck as he scrambled through the window of his playhouse in the backyard of the family home in Blackmoorfoot, England.

"As he climbed out, it appears as though his collar got caught on the window latch hook," Officer Alan Hollis said. "The zipper apparently pressed against his windpipe as he hung from the window, five feet off the ground."

Rusty's teenage brother, Craig, saw him dangling from the window and rushed out to help. He tried CPR on the boy, but it was too late. Rusty was dead on arrival at a hospital.

"The sad part is that Rusty had been playing with his pals for most of the afternoon. They had just left when the accident happened," said Officer Hollis.

MYSTERY OF THE VANISHING CORPSE

Twins make 15-story suicide leap

...BUT COPS FIND ONLY ONE BODY!

By MICKEY McGUIRE
Correspondent

As hundreds of shoppers watched in horror, twin brothers joined hands and leaped from the top of a downtown 15-story building — but only one corpse was found on the pavement below!

The other had vanished into thin air!

Though the bizarre double suicide in the heart of Mexico City has dumbfounded authorities, paranormal experts believe the missing brother was somehow snatched into another dimension or beamed up to an alien starship.

"It was as if the ground had opened up and swallowed one of the brothers," said Luis Cardena, an accountant who had watched through binoculars as the horrifying drama unfolded across the street from his office.

"I watched them stand on the ledge of the roof for almost 10 minutes," Cardena said. "I could see them very clearly through my glasses. At first, I thought I was seeing double. Then I realized I was actually looking at twins.

"They just stood there on the ledge. They didn't talk or look at each other.

"Finally, they held each other's hand and just stepped into space. I watched them plunge all the way down, though I did close my eyes just before they hit the ground.

"But when I looked again, there was only one body. It couldn't possibly have bounced out of my view. It had vanished!"

Cops say there is no doubt that two men, 18-year-old twin brothers Raphael and Carlos Fernandez, jumped from the building.

In addition to witnesses, a suicide note signed by both men was found taped to the ledge where they made their death leap.

But only the body of Carlos was found. Cops have been unable to locate Raphael — dead or alive.

"The note is addressed to their sister," a police spokesman said. "The brothers were in love with the same woman and the woman had scorned them both.

"The note said the affair had turned them into enemies and that they had decided to die together to end the pain they both felt."

Witnesses who saw the two men leap hand-in-hand from the building said that when they ran to the spot where both should have landed they found only one body.

"I saw them leap and I watched them as they fell," declared Roberto Medina, who was on the sidewalk waiting for a bus. "Like the other people who saw them, I ran to where they would land.

"I didn't expect to find them still alive, but I was not prepared for what I saw. There was only one body lying on the ground. How is that possible? Two men jumped but only one was found. It is very spooky."

Despite the vivid eyewitness accounts, authorities have officially recorded one suicide and have listed Raphael as "missing."

"It isn't that we don't believe the witnesses," the police spokesman explained. "But without Raphael's body, what else can we do? It would seem some very powerful forces have been at work in this case."

Nicotine is the toughest habit to kick

Why is it so hard to kick the smoking habit? Because nicotine is the most addictive drug in the world, say medical experts.

In fact it is harder to stop using nicotine than it is to get off crack cocaine or heroin, according to a study reported in To Health magazine.

Crack ranks just below nicotine in addictive power. Some of the other drugs, listed in order of their addictive power, include:

Valium. Seconal, alcohol.

Hair growing serum turns bald guy into terrifying wolfman!

By SCOTTY PAUL
Special correspondent

Something went horribly wrong when a baldheaded broker tried a miracle Chinese hair-growing formula — and ended up with a face full of hair.

"I look worse than the wolfman. My wife won't sleep with me. My kids are scared to death of me. People avoid me like the plague," said worried Wagener Vogelaar.

The frightening family man from the Netherlands had tried every hair-growing technique imaginable with no success until he heard about the Chinese serum.

He saved his money for a year and then flew from his home in Amsterdam to Beijing.

The Wan Wei Fu formula worked like a charm. Vogelaar, 43, had a full head of hair when he flew home three days later.

But his happiness turned to horror when Vogelaar woke up two days later and felt his face. It was covered with hair — long hair.

"You can imagine what went through my mind when I looked in the mirror," he said. "Hair was growing over my eyes and I couldn't tell where my mouth and nose were.

"I looked like a hideous monster from a horror movie, and still do."

Vogelaar has stayed close to home since that fateful day, except for several trips to dermatologists and specialists, who haven't been able to stop the hair from growing.

"I've never encountered anything like this in my 35 years of practice," said Dr. Hans Schegel, who flew in Amsterdam from Germany free of charge to try and help Vogelaar.

Lab experts have analyzed contents of the bottle of hair-growing solution Vogelaar brought back from China.

"The solution contains nothing that we can find that would cause what has happened," said Dr. Karl Prieur.

"After consulting with other specialists, we have determined that nothing short of plastic surgery will help Mr. Vogelaar, and there is a great risk of disfigurement even then," said Dr. Schegel.

"He has the hair of an animal and we have found nothing that will keep it from growing and growing," he said.

Vogelaar has taken a leave of absence from his brokerage job and must decide soon whether he will undergo plastic surgery.

"Anything would be an improvement to the way I look now, even if I was left scarred forever," he said. "Being bald seems like a blessing now."

Endangered species: HIGH SCHOOL VIRGINS

A staggering 73 percent of students have lost their virginity by the time they graduate from high school! So says the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, which surveyed 12,000 students in grades 9-12 and found that:

• 70 percent claim to have used some form of contraception during their last sexual encounter.

• Boys are much more likely to have engaged in sexual intercourse than girls.

Stricken mom-to-be has her Space

By FRANK DE FILIPO
Special correspondent

An overjoyed mother-to-be says space aliens took her aboard a spaceship — and cured her of leukemia!

"They saved my life and the life of my child," Greta Brendt, 34, told reporters in Bremen, Germany.

"My own doctors said we were doomed and there was nothing they could do for us.

"But those strange men knew exactly what to do. They used all sorts of strange lights and instruments to cure me of the killer leukemia."

MOMENTO-ME Greta Brendt would like to thank the space aliens with all her heart.

Dr. Klaus Wenderoth, the woman's obstetrician, confirmed that she developed leukemia, but miraculously she no longer shows any sign of having the terminal disease.

The doctor refused to discuss her alleged encounter with extraterrestrials but conceded, "that something miraculous must have happened to have given her this cure."

Mrs. Brendt herself insists that she was abducted by four space aliens who subjected her to terrifying but painless medical procedures before releasing her. She was unharmed.

"I found out that I was pregnant and had leukemia on the same day in December," said Mrs. Brendt.

"In fact, I had just about made up my mind to take my own life when two men with long pointed noses and ears approached me as I was getting into my car.

"When I turned toward them they looked at me with piercing black eyes and motioned me to follow.

"I wanted to resist but couldn't or even run that I couldn't shake off."

According to several newspaper accounts, the woman said she followed the strangers into a vacant lot several miles from her home. Then she was taken aboard a saucer-shaped UFO that was "a pulsating bluish color, about the size of a school bus."

Once inside the aliens ushered her into a dark circular room, where she was placed on a padded table and strapped down.

"For the first time I was afraid and I started to scream," said Mrs. Brendt.

"When I did, two other men came into the room and pointed a strange-looking flashlight at me.

"One of them pulled a large instrument and light down from the ceiling and pointed it in my face.

"I didn't feel any pain but the men were so frightening I must have passed out."

When an astonished Mrs. Brendt woke up she was sitting in her own backyard!

ARTIST'S conception of how the space aliens cured Gayle Brandt of her terminal disease.

"Whoever or whatever those men were I want to thank them with all my heart," said Mrs. Brandt.

Claude Poher, the noted French UFO researcher, said the woman's story "is remarkable, especially since similar incidents have been reported worldwide over the past several years."

"In 1968, for instance, Sylvia Masiers was abducted from her home near Paris by space aliens and cured of AIDS.

"It's premature to declare this a trend. We're going to have to take a closer look at these occurrences."

Infant dumped in washing machine

A heartless couple tried to wash their hands of a newborn baby by dumping her in a washing machine!

The infant, dressed only in a diaper, was found at a Laundromat in Des Moines, Iowa by a night worker. The machine was not on, but the baby was bleeding from her head.

The worker told police she had just picked the baby up when the couple returned. The man kicked her in the face and threatened to harm her if she reported the incident to the police.

A kinky crook wound up dazed and empty-handed when he swiped a carton of cigarettes from a supermarket — then crashed through the automatic "in" door on his way out!

Weiss said he spotted the dumbo desperately trying to stuff the smokes down the front of his pants and yelled at him to stop. Instead, the thief smashed through the quarter-inch-thick plate glass door to make his getaway.
